A. Existing Physical Description

The Schmidt House located at 1107 Caledonia Street, is a four bedroom, two-and-a-half story, single family home. It serves as a well-preserved example of an Arts & Crafts Style American Foursquare. At the time of construction, two additional rooms were added on the back of the house for Conrad Schmidt's optometry practice. The house faces east, sitting on a field stone foundation, and employs wood frame construction. The house extends deep into a narrow city lot, has a low-pitched, hipped roof with deep overhanging eaves, and two dormers (a central dormer facing east and a side dormer facing south). [See Photos #1, #13.]

The east elevation prominently displays two pairs of windows above a full-length front porch with a low-pitched, hipped roof and beadboard ceiling, supported by four boxed columns. The front porch and lower third of the house are covered by horizontal bands of wood clapboard siding, while the rest of the house displays a richly textured stucco exterior. The east elevation also displays a large three window bay and the original oak and beveled-glass front door. [See Photos #1 - #2.]

The south elevation features a hanging-bay for the dining room windows. The north elevation features a hanging bay for windows in the staircase, which sits above a secondary entrance that provides access to the basement and living quarters. The west elevation has an upper-level deck sitting above the rooms used as Conrad Schmidt's optometry practice and the hanging bay used to support the dining room's built-in china closet. The west elevation also contains the original, cast iron coal chute. [See Photos #3 - #6.]

The living quarters of the Schmidt House follow a traditional American Foursquare layout. The main floor is divided equally into four sections: foyer, living room, dining room, and kitchen. (The kitchen also provided interior access to the optometry practice.) The doors, windows, staircase components, and other millwork throughout the house are original, and representative of early 20th century Segelke & Kohlhaus products found in their catalogs. Every room in the house features crown molding, baseboards, and ornate heat registers. [See Photos #7 - #9.]

The foyer, living room, and dining room feature oak floors. The rest of the house has maple flooring. The foyer and living room have matching leaded-glass transom windows. The living room and dining room have matching three window bays featuring upper panes of leaded-glass. The eight leaded-glass windows on the main floor have a total of 286 individual pieces of beveled glass. [See Photos #7 - #9.]

A colonnade separates the foyer from the living room. Another colonnade with built-in, leaded-glass bookcases separates the living room and dining room. The dining room prominently displays a built-in china closet with leaded-glass cabinets, flanked by a matching pair of decorative art glass windows. The art glass windows feature an abstract floral design in slag glass. [See Photos #8 - #10.]

B. Narrative History

The Schmidt House is an American Foursquare located at 1107 Caledonia Street. It was built in 1916. [See Photos # 14 - #15 Plumber's Application and Return from August - September 1916.] For thirty-six years the building contained Conrad Schmidt's optometry practice, in addition to serving as the private residence for him, his wife Anna, and their daughter Viola (1917-1953 City Directories). The location and the modified floor plan exemplify the building's significance for understanding La Crosse's broader economic and social history. Since the later 19th century, Caledonia Street has functioned as a hybrid zone in the city's North Side: businesses, community institutions, and private residences have co-existed, creating a mixed-use neighborhood. When the Schmidt House was built, its dual-purpose nature matched the overall character of the neighborhood. The 1915 and 1917 La Crosse City Directories show that the 900 - 1400 blocks of Caledonia Street contained grocers and butchers, confectioners, bicycle repairers, opticians, plumbers, photographers, barbers, and suppliers of furniture, clothing, and shoes in addition to single family homes and apartments. Beyond commercial needs, the area offered other types of social gathering places. St. James Catholic Church (ca 1900) is directly across the street from the Schmidt House. The 1200 block of Caledonia Street hosted a succession of theatres: the Dreamland Theatre appears in the 1915 City Directory; after 1920, residents of Caledonia Street could go to the Riviera Theatre (Footsteps of La Crosse Tour Overview).

Given the way public and private spaces mingled on Caledonia Street, it makes sense that Conrad Schmidt would have chosen this location to settle his family and start a business. But the North Side's reputation as a bustling immigrant community also likely influenced his decision. In the early 20th century, the area was home to first and second generation German, Irish, Norwegian, Syrian, and Lebanese immigrant families (Brown, 4; Linder, 22). Conrad Schmidt emigrated from Germany in 1892 at the age of 18 (1920 U. S. Census). He and his Wisconsin-born wife Anna lived in Juneau County before moving to La Crosse (1905 Wisconsin Census). The move to La Crosse seems to have represented an upward mobility opportunity for the Schmidts. Settling on the North Side allowed them to become a part of the vibrant German-speaking community; living on a major commercial thoroughfare made it easier for Conrad to attract patients, expanding his optometry practice. In this sense, the Schmidt House exemplifies the best of the immigrant experience in La Crosse.

The house stayed in the Schmidt family's ownership until daughter Viola died in 1968. A La Crosse Tribune "Homes for Sale" listing in 1968 demonstrates that the building maintained its private/public combined layout until her death. The listing describes four bedrooms and one bathroom upstairs, and "2 rooms down, having separate entrance. Suitable for office or bedroom use." [See Photos # 16 - #18.] Sometime after 1968, the house was converted to a duplex, with the upper level becoming rooms for rent. Temporary partitions were established separating the upper and lower levels. In 1997, the house was converted back to a single family home. An upper-level kitchen (most likely a bedroom in 1916) was converted into a library with built-in bookshelves.

These post-1968 renovations altered the appearance of the lower-level rooms that were originally used as Conrad Schmidt's optometry practice. The room that was likely his examination room had a large, built-in storage cabinet. The cabinet was removed and replaced with a sink, and the room was converted into a bathroom. The room that likely functioned as the waiting room became a bedroom. Originally, this room had a separate entrance and vestibule, but the entrance was sealed off and the vestibule was converted into a closet. The closet door is a heavy, exterior Arts & Crafts style door with a dentil molded shelf that faces the inside of the closet, the direction of the former entrance. The original door and entryway that optometry patients had used was simply converted into a closet sometime after Viola's death. The only sign of alteration to the foundation is the area outside the closet, most likely where exterior stairs leading to the optometry practice would have been. [See Photos #11 - #12.]

The surviving evidence of the back rooms' original, commercial, purpose highlights the Schmidt House's significance within the economic and social history of La Crosse. More broadly, the building is situated at the heart of a "survivor's district" in the city's Old Towne North area. The Schmidt House is two doors down from local cultural institutions The Sweet Shop (building dates to ca 1883) and The Maid Rite (building dates to ca 1894). St. James Catholic Church (ca 1900) and St. Clara's Convent (ca 1893) are across the street. Another historic home, the Ranum-Nelson House (ca 1912), already designated on the local historic register, is just around the corner at 1132 Rose Street. While there are many American Foursquare style homes in La Crosse, the Schmidt House is historically significant not just because it retains its original millwork and windows, but because it also offers insights into how early 20th century professionals combined their work and family lives. It also offers insights into the nature of the opportunities available to immigrants settling in La Crosse a century ago.
