I just want to say I am against banning camping in the marsh.

First of all, the homeless population currently has nowhere else to go and secondly, this is a place where they aren't really bothering people in a residential or business area. Yes, we need to discourage a "tent city," but until new ideas and solutions materialize, we need to be tolerant and give them a space until they can find remedies for housing or find jobs to assist them with financial difficulties.

Thank you for your concern,
Trinie MacFarland
