I am writing in support of the South Branch Library keeping it's historical protected status as a heritage site. La Crosse has lost so much of its brand old historical public buildings. Gone are the beautiful old US Post Office, the Old City Hall, the beautiful original downtown library, and so many more. The buildings that stand now in these locations are poor visual replacements that are designed to be torn down with time. The original buildings like the South Branch library were built to be there for many, many generations to enjoy. Its very presence adds to the neighborhood. It is something that simply can't be replaced in today's world because buildings are rarely constructed with that much love anymore.
